Gira hans zimmer 2025

Such an amazing performance by an amazing man and orchestra! The performance went on longer than I thought (Approximately 8 pm to passed 11 pm) so I had to leave before the concert was finished. The sound was pretty good from where I was sat (stage left block S5 Row U). Minor annoyance was that a black curtain at the side of the stage obscured our seats from seeing part of the orchestra. The bad points were firstly the venue. The chairs in the balcony were plastic, cheap and not very comfortable. The steps up to Row U in block S5 was very high with steps that were not lit and could likely cause someone to fall. I saw no accessibility options to get up to this block, nor was I offered assistance by staff (I walk with a cane). The bad points were secondly the crowd. With minutes to go till curtain up there were still people filtering in trying to find their chairs in the dark. Even those in the front row could not sit still and were still coming in after the show had started. When will venues put patrons comfort ahead of profit? I had to get up out of my chair many times in the first 2 songs because of late comers. The show start time was on the ticket. Plus those that felt they needed to get up after each song annoying fellow concert goers that were trying to enjoy the show. Even though there were negative points due to the venue and the minority of concert goers, it was an excellent show. The sound, the light presentation and songs played were stunning. Would have been good to have a curfew of 11 pm so that those with far to travel (like myself) could still get home after watching the entire show (I had to miss the last 2 songs). I will definitely see Hans Zimmer again in future!! Read more Report as inappropriate Hans Zimmer (born September 12, 1957) is a world renowned German pianist, film composer and music producer, hailing from Frankfurt am Main, West Germany. Born to a musical mother and an inventive, engineering father, Zimmer took piano lessons at an early age however stopped after a few weeks not liking the discipline of formal lessons. After this time Zimmer began experimenting with the piano, making modifications to its design by adding the likes of chainsaws, which marked the beginning of Hans Zimmer's excursions into electronic synthesisers. After moving to England, Zimmer began writing the music for television commercials during which time he met the musicians Trevor Horn and Geoff Downes and formed the rock group entitled The Buggles. The band subsequently released the worldwide smash hit "Video Killed the Radio Star", which became the first ever video broadcasted on MTV in 1979. Citing the influences of composers Ennio Morricone, Elmer Bernstein, John Barry, and more notably Stanley Meyers, Zimmer directed his efforts to writing film scores, using both classical and electronic techniques of sound production. After founding Lillie Yard Studios in London alongside Stanley Meyers, the pair scored the soundtracks to the films, "Moonlighting", "Success is The Best Revenge", "Insignificance" and the hit "My Beautiful Launderette". The success of these soundtracks introduced Zimmer to Hollywood, and was subsequently invited to assist Ryuichi Sakamoto and David Byrne score Bertolucci's epic "The Last Emperor". After a handful of other film scores including "Driving Miss Daisy", "Days of Thunder", and "Backdraft". By this time Zimmer had focused his attentions on writing action movie scores for the likes of "Thelma and Louise", "Peacemaker", and Grammy Award-winning "Crimson Tide". After scoring "The Power of One" in 1992 using African choirs and drums, Walt Disney Animation Studios contacted Zimmer to compose the soundtrack for "The Lion King". Zimmer subsequently won an Academy Award for Best Original Score, a Golden Globe, and two Grammys for the soundtrack. The musician continued to compose soundtracks for a stream of films throughout the 2000s including "Gladiator", "The Last Samurai", "The Da Vinci Code", "Pirates of the Caribbean", "Sherlock Holmes" and "Inception". The result of which turned Zimmer into one of the most respected film composers in the world, earning a star on the "Boulevard der Stars" in Berlin, Germany, four Grammy Awards, two Golden Globes, and four Classical BRIT Awards.
